

Rathje Woodward's primary concern is the health and safety of our employees, clients and global community. We therefore have made contingency plans to follow public health experts' social distance recommendations, including encouraging employees to work remotely.

We understand that many of our clients are experiencing tremendous upheaval and business disruption at this time. Rathje Woodward remains committed to serving the needs of our clients and community during this difficult time.

