Amanda concentrates her practice in the areas of trusts and estates litigation, wealth preservation, trust administration, probate administration, and general litigation. Amanda is an experienced litigator, having represented clients through claims of contested estate and trust administration, contests to estate plans, elder abuse, and breaches of duty by fiduciaries. She is known for building and maintaining relationships with clients through trust and collaboration.

Amanda is actively involved in public service. She was the recipient of the DuPage Legal Assistance Foundation Pro Bono Service Award in 2019. Amanda also serves on the Board of Directors of the DuPage County Bar Association, the Justinian's Association for Italian American Lawyers, and as an Officer in the DuPage Association of Women Lawyers. Before choosing to pursue the practice of law, Amanda worked as a behavioral health professional in Maine, serving families with children experiencing mental and developmental disorders, including autism, oppositional defiance disorder, and attachment disorders.
